Quips About Capital Women

WASHINGTON—Close to 60 debutantes, a Cabinet daughter and the darling of a diplomat among them, will make their bows to capital society (as well as making the headlines) at a series of hectically paced holiday balls, teas, receptions and dinners from now until New Year's.

Mamie Eisenhower heads the list of sponsors for the first and biggest event, the annual Debutante Cotillion and Thanksgiving Ball where some 37 will make their bows.

This batch of debs includes girls selected from nine cities on the eastern seaboard as well as local girls, each of whom must also be presented at individual shindigs given by their parents. Most of the debs are daughters of resident society, but also include Constance Seely-Brown, daughter of Rep. and Mrs. Horace Seely-Brown, Jr. (R-Conn.). She is a student at Mount Vernon College here. Another in this group is Catherine de Witt Cabell, daughter of Lt. Gen. Charles Pearre Cabell, USAF, deputy chief of the Central Intelligence Agency, and Mrs. Cabell; also Starr Bullis, daughter of Comdr. William F. Bullis, owner of the Bullis Prep School, which prepares young men for the Naval Academy and West Point.

A slightly more cozy affair will be the elegant annual Washington Debutante Ball on Dec. 21, where parents of some 21 debs will join in presenting their daughters to their friends. Among the belles to be presented are Digna Anne van Roijen, (Continued on Page 22).

daughter of the Sen. and Mrs. Roberta Waugh Fulbright, William Fulbright (D-Ark.) and Jane Booth Wiggelsworth, daughter of Rep. and Mrs. Richard B. Wiggelsworth (R-Mass).

Among the biggest and most glamorous of the individual debut parties is the reception planned by Attorney General and Mrs. Herbert Brownell, Jr., for their younger daughter, Anne, a Swarthmore College student. Like her sister Joan, who was introduced to Washington society two years ago, Anne will make her bow at fabulous Anderson House, where Cabinet and other top government big-wigs do their most plush entertaining.
